

Short Curriculum Guido Maurelli

Guido Maurelli Dr., degree in Literature at the University of Rome “La Sapienza”, Italy, summa con laude, in 1981.

Researcher Manager of Semeion Research Centre of Science and Communication, (Rome, Italy), Institution recognized by the Italian Ministry of University and Scientific Research (MIUR), from 1985 until today. He was lecturer at the Department of Science of Communications at the University of Charleston (West Virginia-USA), from 1982 to 1984. Advisory Editor of the International Journal of Methodology Quality & Quantity, Springer, from 2007 until today.

Expert in the field of Artificial Intelligence, in the application of artificial neural networks and artificial adaptive systems in the social and educational field.

He has published scientific articles and essays into the international journal and books. He has been lecturer in international projects funding by Italian and European Public Institutions. He is currently Responsible for the organization of projects and for the scientific dissemination of Semeion research activities.